VOL. LVIII NO. 46. REDWOOD CITY, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1918. ESTABLISHED 1859.

MRS. PAGE BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN A CONVICT

A suit was filed against Carey Page by the Beeger Tanning Company on Thursday by Ross and Ross to recover the sum of $2,000 alleged to be the sum embezzled by defendant from the tanning company during the past year. It is said the amount was secured by raising the pay checks. Mrs. Page was the bookkeeper there. A fire was discovered Sunday night and it is alleged that Mrs. Page started the blaze to cover up her shortage in the accounts of the firm. The books in the office were saturated with oil. Jesse Beeson discovered the fire and put it out before any damage was done. Mrs. Page was arrested and is held on a charge of arson.

Last week, Carl Beeger, who is manager of the tannery, informed Mrs. Page that in accordance with his usual custom, the audit of the books would begin this week. It is now believed that Mrs. Page feared that the examination of the records would show discrepancies in her accounts and would result in an investigation.

Mrs. Page came to Redwood City a year ago and has been the bookkeeper at the tannery ever since. She resided at North Fair Oaks with a nine year old girl whom Mrs. Beeger has taken in charge.

In Judge Lawler's court in San Francisco in 1913 a woman named Alice C. Page was convicted of forgery and sentenced to serve two years in prison From the discription given it is believed that the accused is the same woman. District Attorney Swart is making an investigation of the matter.

Mrs. Page is feigning insanity and it is thought she will plead insanity when the case comes up for trial.

$1,000 JUDGMENT IS GIVEN SHIELDS

Judge Buck on Wednesday handed down a decision in the damage suit of J. J. Shields, guardian ad litem for Richard Shields, a minor, against the Reed Company and L. Coe Reed, president, giving judgment to Shields for the sum of $1,000.

On July 15, 1917, Richard Shields accompanied by Jos Ross left Redwood City on a motorcycle bound for Sunnyvale. At the corner of Oak Grove avenue and the highway at Menlo Park the motorcycle was run into by an automobile driven by Lee Coe Reed, president of the Reed Co. Young Shields was badly injured. He was confined to the Peninsula hospital for a period of 43 days. Ross was not so severely injured. On September 15, plaintiff instituted the suit to recover damages in the sum of $2,500. The case was tried before Judge Buck some weeks ago, Albert Mansfield appearing for the plaintiff. The decision rendered by the court is as follows:

"The defendant going south on the main highway turned east in Menlo Park, on the corner of Oak Grove Avenue and as far as the evidence shows did not look to the south before making the turn from the main Highway, onto Oak Grove Avenue. It was a duty devolving upon defendant not only to signal when about to make the turn, to those coming behind him but a more important duty rested upon him to see if anyone was coming from the South toward Oak Grove Avenue onto which he was about to turn. If he had looked toward the South then there would have been no necessity for this suit. His duty he failed to do. Judgment for Plaintiff for $1000."

JOSEPH L. ROSS, JR., STARTS SUIT AGAINST REED COMPANY

Joseph L. Ross, Jr., through his attorney, Albert Mansfield, has commenced an action in the superior court against The Reed Company to recover damages in the sum of $2,500 for personal injuries received through the negligence of defendant. On July 15, 1917 plaintiff was riding a motorcycle and was run into at Menlo Park by defendant and severely injured. Richard Shields, who was on the motorcycle with young Ross was also injured.

Young Ross departed for Honolulu on Wednesday to visit his brother, Harvey Ross. He will be gone for about six months. The young man endeavored to enlist in the army but was under weight. He may be accepted by Uncle Sam on his return from the islands.

He received a license from the board of supervisors after a stormy scene at a meeting of the board. The Bungalow is located on the site of the old Millbrae hotel property formerly owned by the late Thomas Fitzgerald.

MEETING OF WAR SAVINGS COMMITTEE FEBRUARY 26TH

Jos. H. Nash, Chairman of the Redwood City U. S. Committee has sent out the following letters to the General Committee and the Thrift Stamp agents:

There will be a meeting of the Redwood City War Savings Committee on Tuesday evening, February 26th, at 8 o'clock in the Board of Supervisors room in the Court House.

An appeal is especially made to the merchants to be present at this meeting. Many of them who have been authorized to sell Thrift Stamps have done no work whatever for the Government.

The last bulletin received from Headquarters contained the significant words "You are authorized to impress your retail merchants with the fact that the Government may find it necessary to compel them to act as agents for the sale of Government securities under stringent terms and conditions, whereas the present plan affords them a way of gaining the good will of the public through rendering voluntary patriotic services."

Let there be no absentees on the 26th. Never mind what the other fellow is going to do. The matter of helping your Government is a question of your own conscience and as Harry Lauder says "Just as each man must answer his grandchildren some day, when they ask him what he did in the war, so each man must answer his own heart now."

Henry Steinberger reports active work and much enthusiasm at the Frank Tannery. The workman have been organized and each one is buying a certain amount of thrift stamps a week.

The sale in Redwood City last week were over $3,000.

W. H. DOXSEE WRITES FROM CAMP LEWIS

C. M. Doxsee has received an interesting letter from his son, Wilbur, who is at Camp Lewis. The young man is enjoying army life and writes enthusiastically concerning it. He writes as follows:

Camp Lewis, February 3 1918

Dear Folks:

Our company is still in quarantine for measles, so there is nothing to do today but eat our regular meals and write letters.

Last Thursday we had our first snow storm. Friday morning we woke up to see the ground and trees covered with a mantel of white and flakes still falling. It was a new experience for many of the boys but they all took to it naturally and every fellow was regarded as a friendly enemy, and became a target for harmless snowballs. Snow men quickly appeared before many of the barracks. The following sketch will give you some idea of the appearance of the barracks after the storm.

The snow did not hinder our drill but we waded around on guard like regular Alpine "chausseurs." It melted during the day then froze Friday night, so yesterday the whole ground was covered with a sheet of ice and many a soldier who heretofore had always been steady received his first downfall.

The last few days we have had gas mask drill and the boys are able to adjust their masks in eight seconds or less. Next Tuesday we go to the gas house where we are treated to chlorine gas, for five minutes. The principle of the gas mask is that the air drawn in through the mouth tube passes through a container of charcoal and chemicals and is neutralized so it is absolutely harmless. We played relay races and ran with them on and had a "slobbering" good time in general.

Our new Enfield rifles have been issued to us and we expect to get on the range with them this week.

February 8th.

We have been on the range for three days now and will be there seven days more. Everyone has to go out and so far the cooks and clerks have made better records than some of the supposed experts. Chris, who never shot a gun in his life, was high man today. I had a good score up to the time it was getting dusk and today I only got two out of ten hits at three hundred yards rapid fire. It is interesting and good fun but we have to get up at 5:15 and hike about two miles and then we do not get back until late in the afternoon. The whole regiment is out and each company has a certain number of targets and each serves dinner out there. There are no days off during target practice. We are all quite anxious to beat the "Dough Boy's" record.

Must close and fall in line for pay.

Love to all,

WILBUR

Last Saturday John C. Barg commenced an action in the superior court against Louis Blas to recover damages in the sum of $5,000 for slander alleged to have been circulated by defendant shortly after the sinking of the Tuscania by a German U-boat. Defendant is alleged to have heard Mr. Barg say "Well I see we got one of their troop ships at last."

Mr. Barg denies this entirely and says he was at Sunnyvale on the day the rumor is alleged to have started. He will push the case to the bitter end. Mr. Barg is the father of County Recorder Will Barg. Blas is proprietor of the Broadway Restaurant and says he has four nephews in France fighting for the American colors.

GRAND JURY ENDS SESSION WITH MANY PERTINENT SUGGESTIONS

The grand jury which has been in session since last November was discharged in the superior court room last Wednesday by Judge Buck having filed its report.

No recommendation was made by the inquisitorial body for a new county hospital although the committee appointed to bring the matter before the board of supervisors reported that they had done so and the board agreed to take up the question later.

The committee appointed to investigate the lighting districts of the county reported that lights were permitted to burn during the day as well as night time. The secretary of the grand jury was instructed to bring the matter before the state railroad commission.

C. V. Rowe, the expert appointed to examine the accounts of the county officials, made a concise and brief report. This is in striking contrast to the volumniuos reports made by former experts. Mr. Rowe gives all the county officers a complete bill of health in the following terse sentence:

"We are pleased to remark on the excellent condition which we found all county records. The work is kept up to date and is efficiently performed."

The jury makes the following recommendations:

That the Board of Supervisors be required to pass an rdinance forbidding the sale of fruits, flowers or other products on the highways of the County.

That the Taffic Officers give their entire time to the County service.

That an ordinance be passed forbidling peddlers from without the county selling without a license.

That no more permits for dancing be issued to places where liquor licenses are held.

That the law requiring bills presented to the County to be itemized, be obeyed in all cases.

That Redwood City pay the County the jail epenses of her local cases.

We urge a more judicious use of the telephone by the various officers be followed.

Your committee appointed to investigate the office of County Purchasing Agent reports that it finds the office well conducted. An excellent system has been established by the Purchasing Agent that as resulted in a great saving to the County. We find, however, that the office is very much underpaid.

We your committee on county morals beg leave to submit the following:

Believing that dancing where intoxicating liquor is served is detrimental to the best interests of the county, we therefore recommend that the dancing licenses be discontinued.

HAYES TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR

A very large number of Republicans in Southern California and in other parts of the state have urged me to permit my name to be used at the coming primary election for the nomination for Governor on the Republican ticket. I have concluded to comply with this request and will make the race.

Very briefly stated, the platform upon which I shall make the campaign is as follows:

1. The affairs of the state must be so conducted as to aid the national government in every possible way to carry on the war to a successful conclusion.

2. No return must be made to old conditions in state administration. The advance made during the past eight years should be preserved and perfected while the defects are corrected or eliminated.

3. The expenses of state government should be materially reduced. The best business experience and methods should be employed to coordinate the various state activities and eliminate waste and unnecessary expense. How this can be accomplished will be pointed out in greater detail later.

4. Our laborers in every field of activity are the best paid, best fed, and most comfortably quartered in the world. Their condition must continue to improve. The men of property and those who employ labor must also be treated with fairness and justice, that the proper balance in our industrial life may be maintained. We are all toilers in this country and the ideal state will be found where full credit and honor are accorded the men who toil and where mutual respect, justice and fair dealing control the conduct of the employer and the employed in their dealings with each other.

5. Further changes in our fundamental law should be made, or preferably, a new constitution should be adopted. But this work should wait the close of the war when the best thought of the state now largely employed in war work can be given to these problems.

6. Additional state aid should be given in solving the problems of food production and distribution, and these problems should be made the study of the most learned and the most practical minds to be obtained. The soil should be made to produce more abundant and more uniform crops of grains, vegetables, fruits and food animals, and the system of distributing these products should be improved so that the producer will be assured a profitable return for his land and labor and the consumer be able to obtain the necessities of life at the minimum of expense. The fact that I have all my life been a farmer and fruitgrower makes me keenly alive to the necessities of this branch of industry.

7. The demands made by the war upon the man power of the nation has resulted in greatly enlarging the scope of woman's activities. As a result, the capacity of women in almost every field of human endeavor has been fully demonstated. In many branches of industry they have been shown to be more efficient than men. Where women do the work of men and produce equal results they should be paid equal compensation. The work of women in war activities has also demonstrated that their patriotism and interest in public matters are as great as are those of men. By their activities and their devotion to the public welfare they have earned and should be accorded a larger voice in public matters. If elected I shall call upon the women to assist in the public sevice in larger measure than ever before.

8. I strongly favor a system of invalid and old age insurance. No expense to the state on this account should be incurred uutil the end of the present war, but there should be begun at an early date a thorough investigation of all the plans of invalid and old age insurance now in operation in any of the states and of alf foreign systems. This information will be useful in the formulation of a system of insurance to be adopted in this state at the close of the war. This work can be done by some branch of the public service now in existence without material expense to the public treasury.

9. I am deeply interested in the different humanitarian movements looking to improvement in the treatment and handling of the defective and criminal classes, and will be glad to aid in every resonable way any effort designed to raise the standard of human life, improve living conditions and lessen the waste and suffering that result from crime, insanity and imbecility.

As the campaign progresses I will explain more fully my position on all questions affecting the welfare of the state.

J. O. HAYES

DESCRIBES COMING OF CAPT. JOHN GREER

Mrs. Fremont Older in her series of articles on pioneers of the Santa Clara valley, written for the San Jose News, tells an interesting story of one of Palo Alto's oldest pioneers, under the title, "How Greer Came to Palo Alto," as follows:

In the year 1849 Captain John Greer, father of Miss Eliza Greer and Joseph and Lucas Greer, came to Palo Alto. To be accurate, Captin Greer arrived in a rowboat at the tepee of Feliciano and Rojerio, two Indians, who lived on the bank of the San Francisquito creek.

Greer, as his title indicates, was in command of a trading ship that came into the harbor of San Francisco in the year of the great gold rush. He liked California and he said to himself that this was the country where he would pass the rest of his days. Greer and a young man on the English ship talked it over. This man's name was David McKracken. Like McKacken, Greer was an Irishman. Both were young. Both had been sailing on the seas for years. Both had learned a little Spanish in South America where they had been trading. They were filled with love of adventure. They lived in a time when adventure was an every day necessity. While lying in San Francisco harbor they decided to take a rowboat and launch themselves on the next tide, to follow whither it would take them. They watched the inrush of the waters, and when it went outward to it they gave their destinies.

It was easy to row with the tide, and it was a great lark to ride on its swelling bosom into a new world, to take from the tide what it had to offer. When they felt the pull of the waves against them they landed and waited till the tide favored them again. The family of Mr. Greer do not know how long it took the two youths to make the journey, but Joseph Greer tells me that although it is about 40 miles from San Francisco to Palo Alto, by coming with the tide the journey might have been easily made in a day.

Probably the seamen landed on the shore on the way, for when they arrived and rowed up the San Francisquito creek Feliciano, the Indian woman, had a plank across the creek and was washing. It was probably morning. The strangers saluted Feliciano in Spanish. She screamed. Here were white men speaking Spanish! Never had she seen any one so fair who could speak her language. There must be something wrong with them. She called her husband, Rojerio.

The young seamen gave an acount of themselves. In South America they had learned Spanish. They were seamen, tired of the esa. They had come to live here with them by the San Francisquito.

Feliciano and Rojerio had not much to give, but immediately the hospitality of the little tepee was offered to the strangers. This quick proffer of the humble all was to be made a kind of friendship between the esamen and the Indians never to be broken.

With the Indians the strangers remained and for a time the tepee was their only home. What became of David McKracken the Greers do not know. Often as their father spoke of his friend, McKracken had vanished from the memory of all. Probably he did not remain long. But young Greer leased a few acres of land from Mrs. Rafael Soto in the east end of Palo Alto alongside the creek and there raised vegetables.

Mrs. Soto had a widowed daughter, Mrs. John Coppinger, who lived in Woodside. Coppinger's origin was somewhat in doubt. but he was a seafaring man who probably came to California in the late twenties. He was said by some to be an American, but others said he was Irish or English. When he became a citizen he lost his identity and was a Spanish-Californian. He took a large part in politics. He was a partner of Alvarado, and from him in turn received the Canada de Raimundo in San Mateo county. Part of Woodside is on the site of the Coppinger place.

Coppinger had a very busy, active life and died young. He left a pleasing widow, Maria Luisa, who was just 32 when Greer arrived. Always the fair foreign youths were greatly admired by the Spanish-Californians. Soon the young seaman and the widow became betrothed. One day they rode to the Santa Clara mission and were married. Then back they went to the ranch at Woodside, and for three days there was fiesta, barbecue and fandango.

Rojerio died and Feliciano was left alone. Always at the home of the Greers was there a welcome for her. She stayed weeks at a time with the Greers, departing as suddenly as she arrived. When she made up her mind to go nothing could stop her. Within a few minutes she was on her way to the John Reeds at San Rafael, or the Mission Dolores, where she had friends. Feliciano was a devout Catholic. Many years ago she died among her friends in the north.

Halfmoon Bay Notes

The social given by the young ladies' sodality Wednesday evening proved a very pleasant event in every respect. There was dancing for the young folks and cards for such who did not care to dance. Mrs. Moore furnished the music on the piano. Coffee and cake were served. All enjoyed themselves immensely.

Gabe Vallejo accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Soby of San Bruno visited friends in town last Sunday. Mr. Soby will be remembered by many people of this town as he had charge of the sand pit some 8 years ago.

Mrs. Garbini who was taken to the Red Cross hospital last week has undergone a successful operation for appendicitis.

Miss Agnes Gilcrest who is to be graduated from the state normal school in San Francisco, is doing substitute teaching in the local grammar school.

Potatoes have been officially placed on the list of wheat flour substitutes by order of the United States Food Administration for California. Retail grocers throughout the state will be affected. Grocers will be required to sell spuds in the ratio of two to one, that is, if the patriotic housewife buys one pound of white flour she will purchase two pounds of potatoes, or if supplied with that staple, she may purchase an equal quantity of substitute flour with the white variety.

Postmaster William J. Debenedetti and merchant of Half Moon Bay was married last Thursday at Jackson to Miss Irma Michelena. The mother, Mrs. Debenedetti is one of the groom attending. The happy young couple will spend a part of their honeymoon in Southern California. Mr. Debenedetti is one of the coastsides most prominent young men and has a great many friends who wish the newly weds prosperity and happiness.

Antone Machdo, a former resident of Half Moon Bay, passed away last where he resided for many years. He was 76 years old. He is survived by three children.

have a little exercise. That was a fatal mistake. In less time than it takes to tell it he had dug a hole under the fence and was soon master of all he surveyed in the chicken yard. The bantams seemed to appeal to him, possibly because they were not much larger than the quail that inhabited the ranch on the mountain which was his former home. There was a commotion in that chicken yard which was as brief as it was disastrous and when it was all over the half dozen birds which "Bill's" mother thought so much of were lying dead on the back porch of the Stafford home, and our dog had maintained his reputation as a retriever. A heartbroken woman was the result, and "Bill' was informed very emphatically that "Dash" must go. There was no use trying to square the matter, so the dog went. But we could not afford to part with such a valuable prize altogether. Both agreed that the reason he had killed the chickens and brought them up on the back porch was because he was, as he had been guaranteed, a natural born retriever, and we expected much from him in the future. So we simply tarnsferred the dog from the Stafford domicile over to my home. Mother had no chickens so we felt perfectly safe on that score. Here we both brought him food and in three weeks had him fattened up so that he made quite a good appearance. Then we decided to take him out on the marsh and try him out. Will I ever forget that day? It makes me laugh now to think of our experience with that dog. Our hopes were high. There was no doubts whatever in our minds but what he would fulfull our fondest dreams and retrieve every bird that we killed. What a bitter disappointment was in store for us. Going down through the field on the way to the marshland we noticed that he was a little wild and seemed to take special delight in chasing the small brown chippies that arose from the tar weed as we walked along. When we started out into the marsh, as a precautionary measure, I tied a rope around his neck and led him, as we did not want a flock of ducks flushed before we were near enough to obtain a good shot. "Bill' was carrying the gun and we wended our way out carefully to the spot where Little Jack Welch had persuaded me, much to my sorrow, to hold his dog some months before. As my pal quietly sneaked up to the "Leaning Stake Creek" I lagged behind about thirty yards, leading the dog who seemed to understand jut what was going to happen. "Bill" was soon down on both knees crawling on all fours, so I knew he saw ducks ahead and some thing would happen soon. Now he was aiming. Whenever that kid took aim something had to drop. In the brief moment at my command I could picture "Dash" rushing out into the water and bringing in a dead or crippled duck just like a Chesapeake Bay spaniel. Bang-bang, both barrels spoke in quick succession. A big drake spoonbill pitched headlong into the creek.

It had been my intention the moment "Bill' shot to let go of the rope by which I held the dog so there would be no time lost in which a crippled bird might get away. That intention was carried out to the letter, but it was entirely involuntarily. The very moment the first shot rang out on the morning air that dog started, not forward in the direction of my pal, but toward home. The rope went out of my hand as though it was greased. In utter astonishment I called the dog loudly by his name. He only went faster. With the speed he was making, coupled with the fact that he was about the color of the tules, it was a difficult matter to follow the line of his flight. How that dog did run. You would think the devil himself was close behind him. "Bill' fired another shot to kill a crippled bird. The dog heard it and let out a few links more. Then my pal called to me to know where the dog was. I pointed to a yellow streak crossing the mud flats, which soon disappeared in the brown tar weed. Then I hastened over to "Bill". Do you believe it? He stood there laughing as though he would split his sides. I could not see the funny side of the matter. All our care of that dog gone for naught and our hopes and anticipations crushed, perhaps forever. In the creek lay three spoonbills floating out with the tide and that thankless dog lending speed, while adding distance to every jump, and living strictly up to the full meaning of the name which we had given him.

"Bill' had killed the ducks, so in the absence of our thoroughbred retriever, the next move was up to me. Quickly I stripped, plunged into the creek and brought the birds to shore. When we reached home the dog was not there. None of the boys had seen him and "Bill' and I never laid eyes on him from that day to this.

That was years ago, but it is safe to assume that if that animal should still be in the land of the living, he is still going, faster and faster, a yellow streak, all, as I told "Bill", because we had been thoughtless enough to bestow upon that ungrateful dog the rather high-bred name of "Dash".

REPORT OF SESSION OF SUPERVISORS

The board of supervisors met in regular session Monday, February 11 at 10 a. m., there being present Dr. C. V. Thompson, T. L. Hickey, Wm. H. Brown, John MacBain and Jos. M. Francis.

R. F. Chilcott, in behalf of Chas. H. Merrill, appeared before the board and presented a map of the Merrill subdivision in Menlo Park, showing certain streets known as Ravenswood avenue, Santa Cruz avenue extension formerly Golden Lane), and Miller avenue, all of which were recently deeded to the County of San Mateo.

A resolution accepting the above map and declaring the three thoroughfares public highways of San Mateo county, was adopted on motion of MacBain, seconded by Hickey.

A communication was received from Miss Elizabeth B. Skeele, executive secretary of the Social Service Commission, making recommendations for increasing the county and state aid in the case of certain needy persons in different parts of the county, and for the withdrawing and reducing State and county aid in several other cases.

In connection with the above communication Supervisor Brown addressed the board and stated that he had referred a case to the Social Service Commission several months ago of an aged woman living in San Mateo who had asked for an increase in the amount of the county aid allowed her but he had not received any report in the matter.

Miss Skeele who was present at the meeting, explained she had made an investigation of the case and after considerable research on her part had finally located the woman's husband's membership in Redwood City Lodge of Masons some years back. The lodge, Miss Skeele said, was now making arrangements to assist the widow.

Miss Skeele further explained that the law does not permit the increase of county aid in individual cases. Emergency aid, however, would have been granted the person in this case had it been asked, she stated.

Several cases where the Social Service Commisssion recommended county allowance in the First township, and which Supervisor Hickey inquired about, Miss Skeele explained were very worthy ones.

On motion of Hickey, seconded by MacBain, the communication from the Social Service Commission was ordered filed and the recommendations contained therein granted.

The regular monthly claims having been approved by the finance committee, were allowed, on motion of MacBain, seconded by Francis.

The applications of C. F. Cooley of Palo Alto; Charles H. Smith of Menlo Park and E. S. Mason of Menlo Park for building permits in the town of Menlo Park were granted, on motion of MacBain, seconded by Franacis.

Supervisor Francis reported that the position of poundmaster at Half Moon Bay had been made vacant, through the moving away of the poundmaster, and on motion of Francis, seconded by MacBain, Frank Canadas was appointed to the position.

On motion of Francis, seconded by MacBain, District Attorney Swart was instructed to prepare the necessary deed for the purchase of a piece of property in the town of Half Moon Bay for a jail site and corporation yard, and County Auditor Shields was instructed to draw a warrant in the sum of $525 for the payment of the property purchased.

A carload of Shooting ranges arrived from the east yesterday for Camp Fremont. The y were at once taken to the rifle ranges of the government in the foothills.

Smith Shooting Gallery is now prepared to cater to the public having had the place reconstructed and put in a number of novelties in the shooting line. The gallery is the largest on the Pacific Coast.

Six hundred soldiers from the Presidio arrived at Camp Fremont Thursday having marched down the peninsula from headquarters. They left the Presidio on Monday. Two thousand men are epxected in from Alabama today.

John Greer has written his parents from "somewhere in France" stating that he is doing well. He says that in his locality one hears nothing but "peace talk". Young Greer only remained one month at Camp Lewis when he was sent abroad.

Frank Derry writes to his parents from Camp Lewis to the effect that he has been promoted to the position of corporal and is attending an officers school with the hope of some day securing a commission. It is hoped that his most roseate dream may be gratified.

Major McMullen, a former resident of Menlo Park, is at Camp Fremont. His family is residing here. The major is a graduate of West Point but some years ago resigned from the army and resided at Atherton. When the war broke out he enlisted and was assigned to Camp Fremont.

Ray Wingfield, proprietor of the Campfire, is doing a rushing business. His home-made cakes and pies and delicious dinners are well patronized by the soldier boys who enjoy home cooking. Then, too, the Campfire is such a cozy, home-like place that the boys long to linger there.

Albert Midgley, young son of Mrs. Henry Midgley, was united in marage in San Francisco last Monday to Miss Ruth Spence, who also resides here. Mr. Midgley is an expert electrician and is employed by M. E. Ryan of Redwood City. The young groomsman has prepared a neat bungalow at Redwood City where the couple will reside.

Eugene Reynolds, a former Redwood City boy, but for some years in the employ of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, has been appointed a station agent at the remount station. Several hundred men and over 2,000 horses are located there. Train loads of animals are coming in over the Dumbarton road almost every day. The remount station is a lively community these days.

The State Banking Department has granted permission to the Bank of Palo Alto to open an office in Menlo Park. The petition signed by Menlo Park people asking permission to organize a new bank was denied, the Banking Department deeming it best to favor a bank already established. Before the Menlo Park petition was circulated, strong efforts were made to induce the Bank of Palo Alto to open a branch here, but the bank would not then consider the propostioin. The increasing business resulting from Camp Fremont evidently caused them to reconsider the matter.

PALO ALTO BANK TO OPEN MENLO BRANCH

Menlo Park is to have a bank. If anything were needed to convince one that the little town established a half century ago has jumped into booming activity this latest sign of the times would clinch it.

Through the University Realty Co., the Bank of Palo Alto has purchased of Charles H. and Phyllis Merrill the corner of the State Highway and Santa Cruz Avenue. This is adjacent to the Fremont Theatre and is in the very heart of Menlo's business district.

The bank has not yet declared its intention as to the type of building which is to be erected but it is understood that it will be for the present an unpretentious structure which can later be replaced by a more permanent building.

DUCK HUNTING REMINISCENCES

STORY NO. 21, By CLAUDE FOX

Shortly after "Bill" and myself had recovered from our experience when caught red-handed poaching in the duck pond of James L. Flood, and were living in an atmosphere of confidence that our future relations with Myles D. Sweeney would be of the most pleasant and friendly character, an event transpired which for a short period of time blasted all our "duckitis" hopes and ambitions had left us heartbroken, discouraged and mourning over a loss, which to us at that time meant a great deal in the pursuit of wild water-fowl. From the day father presented me with the little "Scott" shotgun, my first pal and I were just about crazy to own a good hunting dog, especially one of the Spaniel variety or breed. A pointer we had no use for. We desired a dog that could be depended upon to follow us through the marshes, share our excitement in hunting and above all retrieve the web-foots that fell to our marksmanship. How we did dote on the picture of fine bred dogs published in the book on wild duck hunting by Captain Bogardus, and wished we could own an animal such as those set forth in the illustrations. It was a difficult matter, however, to have our desire in this respect gratified. In those early days dogs of any kind were a scarce article in Redwood City, or in fact in the whole county. Such a being as a poundmaster was unheard of, and any one who had the temerity to seek and acquire that undesirable office would surely have starved to death within a month had he depended on any remuneration from our Town Trustees for taking into custody the four footed friends of man then roaming about the streets. I do not mean to say that there were no dogs within our midst that could not hold a high head, and could they but speak, boast of their ancestors, but of this class there were very few, and they were ever under the watchful eyes of their respective masters. Those that did roam at large without any restrictions, were judging from their looks, cross-bred between a Kansas pararie dog and the coyotte-shepherd combination left as a momento by the early Spanish or Mexican settlers in this vicinity. These however, were scarce and consequently the much despised poundmaster was not only unnecessary, but not wanted. Do you suppose for a single moment that John Crowley, then owner and proprietor of the old "Grand Hotel" would ever condescend to allow an ordinary minion of the law to place a tin tag on the collar that encircled the neck of his thoroughbred Irish setter "Dash"? Can you imagine Lon Cook viewing with composure a common poundmaster exclaiming to his famous old dog "Roxy", one dollar or your life, or mine host Charley Ayres of the "Tremont" permitting his black and white Spaniel "Spot" of blooded stock, imported from "merry Hengland" to be even patted by a stranger? I guess not. But "Bill and I were destined never to be as fortunate, at that particular time at any rate, as the proud owners of the dog just referred to.

But there came a day when our hopes ran high, as only hopes can in the hearts of youngsters desiring to acquire that which both of us so much longed for.

Now "Bill's" step-father, Jack Stafford, was some politician, as all the old timers now living can testify to. If he was not personally in a fight he was sure to be found doing his bit to help elect a friend, and it was sometimes necessary for him to cross the mountain to the coastside in furtherance of his political ambitions or those of his friends. Jack had returned one day from a trip over to the coast, when "Bill" came rushing over to my home on the hop, skip and a jump to inform me that we were at last the proud possessors of a dog, a real hunting dog, with long shaggy tail, and light brown hair, just the color of the marsh grass. A farmer on the mountain had presented the dog to Mr. Stafford, who in turn gave the animal to "Bill". It was to be ours, a 50-50 proposition, for that was one of my first pals manly characteristics. Would I go over and see our new possession? You could not have held me back with a wire cable. We both fairly flew around the corner to the Stafford home where "Bill" had locked the dog up in the wood shed. When the door was opened, much to my surprise, he jumped all over us, as though we had been his masters for years. The cause was quite apparent. That dog was hungry. "Bill" and I were both munching a good sized apple, and we almost lost them in the anxiety of our new found friend to satisfy his famished stomach. While I held him "Bill" went into the house and made a raid on the family pantry. How that dog did eat, but at last he was satisfied and after carefully looking him over we tied him inside the shed and locked the door. We were the proud possessors of a hunting dog at last and we were not going to take any chances of loosing him. The original owner had guaranteed that he would retrieve any thing in the shape of game, so we were happy as two boys could possibly be under the circumstances. Jack had however been too busy fixing up things political with his farmer friends to inquire what the dog's name was, so after a lengthy consultation "Bill" and I decided to call him "Dash". Subsequently events proved that no more appropriate name could ever have been selected from a dictionary of dog appellations. But our troubles had just begun. Mrs. Stafford, "Bill's" mother, was the owner of half a dozen bantam chickens, five hens and a rooster, which she prized very highly. On the third or fourth day after we acquired our four footed friend "Bill' let the dog out in the yard to
